

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of write-protecting a MAC address of a peripheral terminal device stored in a DMI memory. First, programs capable of erasing the MAC address stored in the first memory are disabled. Then, a DMI setting is executed to write-protect the MAC address stored in the second memory. Finally, a program is provided capable of pre-storing the original MAC address.